TEMPERANCE.

BY MISS C. S. BURNETT.

Six Acts in a Tragedy.

Act the First—In a pleasant home in Western Kansas for days a solemn stillness has prevailed, broken by frequent consultations between father and mother with occasional suggestions from the one son in the family, a manly boy of 18, and his two sisters, Anna, aged 20, and Edith, the baby, though she does not now accept the title as very complimentary since she has passed her fourteenth year. The first great question of years is before them. You might not think it is so great since it is only this—times are very hard, an uncle in Kansas City, has offered the son a lucrative position in his store, giving him his evenings for self-improvement. The decision is made; the wagon is driven to the door, the good-bye kiss is given to each and he breaks away from the weeping group and is gone. A farewell kiss is flung back as the wagon goes over the hill.

Act the Second—Two years have passed with only an occasional visit home. The intricacies of business have been mastered, but more has been done. This scene will tell what. In an elegant club room sits our bright young hero of the opening scene. His face is flushed; his words are loud, and his whole manner unnatural. He has fallen into the ways of the young men of the town, and now for the first time has drunk to excess and is in a quarrel over the game of the evening.

Act the Third—In one of the loveliest homes in the city, is heard the sound of revelry. It is the marriage of our friend to the wealthy banker's daughter. They stand under the marriage bell. "O how beautiful they are!" is the thought of all.

The ceremony, the prayer, the congratulations, the wedding feast and departure for the train. The two sisters are present, proud of their brother, but yet there seems a gulf between them. It seems to them that something of his old-time innocence and loyal love has gone. They do not understand him, yet they are glad he has so far succeeded.

Act the Fourth—Five years have gone by. A woman sits in the little home waiting for the coming footsteps. The home her father had given is gone. Harry has lost his place. Drink and gambling have grown rapidly upon him and now he comes staggering in the room. You would not know these two. Marks of hardship are on her face. Neglect and bitter cruelty have been her share. What of the solemn marriage vow, "to love and cherish and protect." Angry words are the only reward for her patient watching. Ring the bell and let the curtain drop.

Act the Fifth—Three graves in a dark place—graves of the two little ones, and the grave of the wife who died of a broken heart. Plenty of weeds but no flowers. Sad commentary on a life so fair in the start and so marred by drink. Sad commentary on our boasted civilization that makes such scenes common.

The wretch of a husband sits in his desolate hovel for a while, then goes to the saloon to drown his grief, drinks and quarrels.

Last Act—In a dungeon with the brand of murder upon him and the gallows in near view, a destroyed soul's eternity. Blackness forever more. But I cannot look longer. Woe! woe! I close my eyes on this last act of a tragedy. Ring the bell and let the curtain drop.

"Rejoice, young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart rejoice in the days of thy youth; but know then, that for all these things God will bring you into judgment." "There is a way that seemeth right to a man but the end thereof is death."

Notes.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., has six saloons to each church, and San Francisco, Cal., has about forty-two.

TOPEKA, Kans., has more churches than any city of its size in the country, and has not a single saloon.

Tax party in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic is composed largely of men of principal, but not of wealth.

In Indianapolis a fine Fisk and Brook's banner, suspended near the Republican headquarters, was torn down and destroyed by ruffians.

Four of the United States have forbidden any body to sell tobacco to children under 16, or any one but the parent or guardian to give it to them.

Only three of the sixteen bishops of the Methodist Church are out and out Prohibitionists—Bishop Goodsell, of Texas; Bishop Hurst, of Washington, and Bishop Fitzgerald, of Minneapolis. The remaining thirteen are Republicans.

In each minute in the United States, night and day, all the year round, twenty-four barrels of beer have to go down 12,000 throats, and 4,830 bushels of grain have come to bin.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN declared the temperance movement to be a noble ally to the cause of political freedom, and its triumph the grandest revolution the world shall ever see.

We need more sermons on the fallacy of high license, or doing evil that good may come. It doesn't come. We need more sermons on the guilt of Christians in making no effort to close the gilded doors to destruction. We need to talk with each other more, and assist in forming a healthy public sentiment about the liquor traffic.

It costs the State of New York $15,000,000 annually to support the inmates of almshouses, workhouses, and correctional institutions, and about $16,000,000 for the maintenance and care of prisons. Moreover, the State has $60,000,000 invested in these buildings. Three-fourths of all this outlay is directly traceable to strong drink.

The people of Chicago spend $115,000,000 for liquor annually; $2,000,000 of this amount goes into the city treasury for license, leaving $113,000,000 in the liquor dealers' pockets, and $113,000,000 less for clothes and food for those who need it and are entitled to it, besides all the crime and wretchedness it engenders.

REPORTS just published show that 717,748 845 gallons of malt liquor were drunk in this country during the fiscal year of 1887, nearly all of which was produced in this country. The per capita now reaches 11.98 gallons, nearly eight times what it was in 1880.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is becoming a universal favorite for restoring gray hair to its original color, and making hair grow thick and strong.
